WAREHOUSE DISTRICT

The historic Waterfront Warehouse District is distinguished by its concentration of well-preserved industrial warehouses constructed during the period 1914 to 1954. The Warehouse District developed around the old Western Pacific spur line and freight depot at 3rd and Harrison Streets, and grew to be a major distribution hub for the wholesale food and grocery industry. The buildings are characterized by their early 20th century utilitarian architecture and house a variety of uses today. Check out the informational placards posted on trash bins around the district to learn more.

JACK LONDON

Welcome to Oakland's original neighborhood! Jack London is a unique mixed-use neighborhood with exciting places to eat, drink, and explore. Blocks from Downtown, Lake Merritt, and the Port of Oakland, some of Oakland's first storefronts and businesses were established here in this historic waterfront community. The Wholesale Produce Market on the blocks of Franklin Street make this a true 24/7 district; operating since 1917 supplying Bay Area restaurants and markets, it is a unique place within the city and region. The neighborhood's legacy as an entertainment destination, a distribution hub for goods, and a home for makers and artists continues today with premiere entertainment venues, a booming bar and restaurant scene, many local breweries and coffee roasters, and tons of public art.

THINGS TO DO

Explore the Warehouse District and murals, grab a locally-crafted beverage, see a show, then catch the ferry or train; there's much to do in our easily walkable and bikeable neighborhood. Cross the railroad tracks to Jack London Square for a stroll along the Oakland Estuary and enjoy an array of waterfront dining options.

Music can be heard almost every night of the week at Yoshi's, the famed spot in the Bay Area for jazz and sushi. Drop by The Elbo Room or Oakland Metro Operahouse for DJ sets, metal shows, and avant-garde performances. Smell roasting coffee beans or hops in the air? This is the heart of the "Beverage Belt", a collection of beverage makers including coffee roasters like Bicycle Coffee Company, popular breweries like Federation Brewing, Original Pattern Brewing, Independent Brewing and Oakland United Beerworks, plus Urban Wine Trail locations Brooklyn West Winery and minimo wine shop. Other beloved beverage purveyors like Beer Revolution, Crooked City Cider, Tiger's Taproom, and Heindol's First and Last Chance Saloon, opened in 1883 and still lit by gas, all call Jack London home. After bar hopping, feast at famous spots like Souley Vegan, Everett and Jones BBQ, and The Fat Lady. Venture East towards NIDO's Backyard for mezc and tacos. Unwind with pub food at Seawolf or try authentic Irish fare and whiskey at Sláinte. Indulge in unique sweets at Miette Patisserie and James and the Giant Cupcake for dessert. Plus, there are plenty of retail options, quality barber shops, and salons to visit. Find multiple bike share stations throughout the district to help you explore. Downtown Oakland, Chinatown, and Lake Merritt are within easy walking and biking distance.
